

100 women in hedge funds™

Roundtable Discussion
Why Volunteerism Matters:
How a Small Contribution of Time Can Bring About Big Change

Tuesday, January 27 at 5:00

Jessica Seinfeld, founder, Baby Buggy
Ken Langone, co-founder, Home Depot, Board Member: Ronald McDonald House, Harlem Children's Zone, Damon Runyon Cancer Center
Peggy Crisalli, JPMorganChase, Vice President, Employee Giving Programs
Gena Lovett, Alexandra Asset Management, Board Member: NY Junior League, Women's Prison Organization

Moderator

Kathleen Kelley, Vantis Capital Management, Co-Chair, 100WHF Volunteerism Committee

The discussion will focus on how these organizations use volunteers to fill out their boards, staff their offices and reach out to the community they are serving, and how without the contribution from volunteers, they could not provide the services that are so desperately needed.

See all the volunteerism opportunities at www.100womeninhedgefunds.org.

Event Details

Date: January 27, 2004

Time: 5:00 Registration

We will begin promptly at 5:30; please arrive early to get through security

Host: JPMorganChase

Location: 270 Park Avenue / Between 47th and 48th Streets / Third Floor

RSVP: www.100womeinhedgefunds.org/events

Please join us in supporting Baby Buggy, a non-profit service that collects gently used and new gear, clothing, and product for infants and young children and distributes these items to families in need in the five boroughs of New York City. The distribution network consists of over 60 social service sites, including respected organizations such as Safe Horizon, Sanctuary For Families, Women In Need, Inwood House, NYC Family Court Child Centers, The Partnership for the Homeless and select foster care agencies. Baby Buggy provides thousands of children in need with basic necessities such as cribs, high chairs, strollers, blankets, shoes, hats, gloves, clothing, and outerwear. Refer to the website at www.babybuggy.org to make a donation.