Biographies

Sarah Toner

Sarah Toner began her career with the National Ballet of Portugal. She came to London and danced with the London City Ballet for two years, performing soloist and principal roles, before becoming a freelance dancer. Sarah was discovered by Sir Kenneth MacMillan and through him she met Sir Peter Wright, the then director of the Birmingham Royal Ballet. She spent two years with the company before departing for New York. Sarah has also been involved in the fashion industry as a model and choreographer. Her passion for fashion has inspired her to teach women deportment and, specifically...how to look good in high heels. This has led to television appearances in Germany and interest from the fashion press, including Harper's Bazaar and Tatler. Her book "Fabulous in High Heels" will be published in September 2009.

Ivana Nohel

She has previously been a designer for luxury womens' labels including Jean Muir and Janet Reger and has designed toys for Sindy Dolls and Walt Disney.
